Mr. McKinlay has no plans for his political future but it is generally be-leved that President Taft will appoint him to some office. He has been selected him to some office. He has been selected on several occasions to do bits of con-fidential work for the President. It was McKinlay who made a canvass of the House for Mr Taft soon after the President was inaugurated and reported back that the President could not control votes enough to oust Speaker Cannon. Mr. McKinlay will go on the lecture platform after the campaign, but expects to be busy speaking most of the time between now and election day. He intends to offer his services to the Republican insurgents in his home State, but is uncertain whether they will accept him.

President Taft attended church this morning and in the afternoon motored to Nahant where he had luncheon at the home of Judge Robert Grant of the Probate Court. While in Nahant the President stopped at the home of Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Col. Roosevelt's warm friend, and had a brief talk with him.
